

Good Sundays Can Change Your Eternity

Romans 1:14-17, Philippians 3:7-9

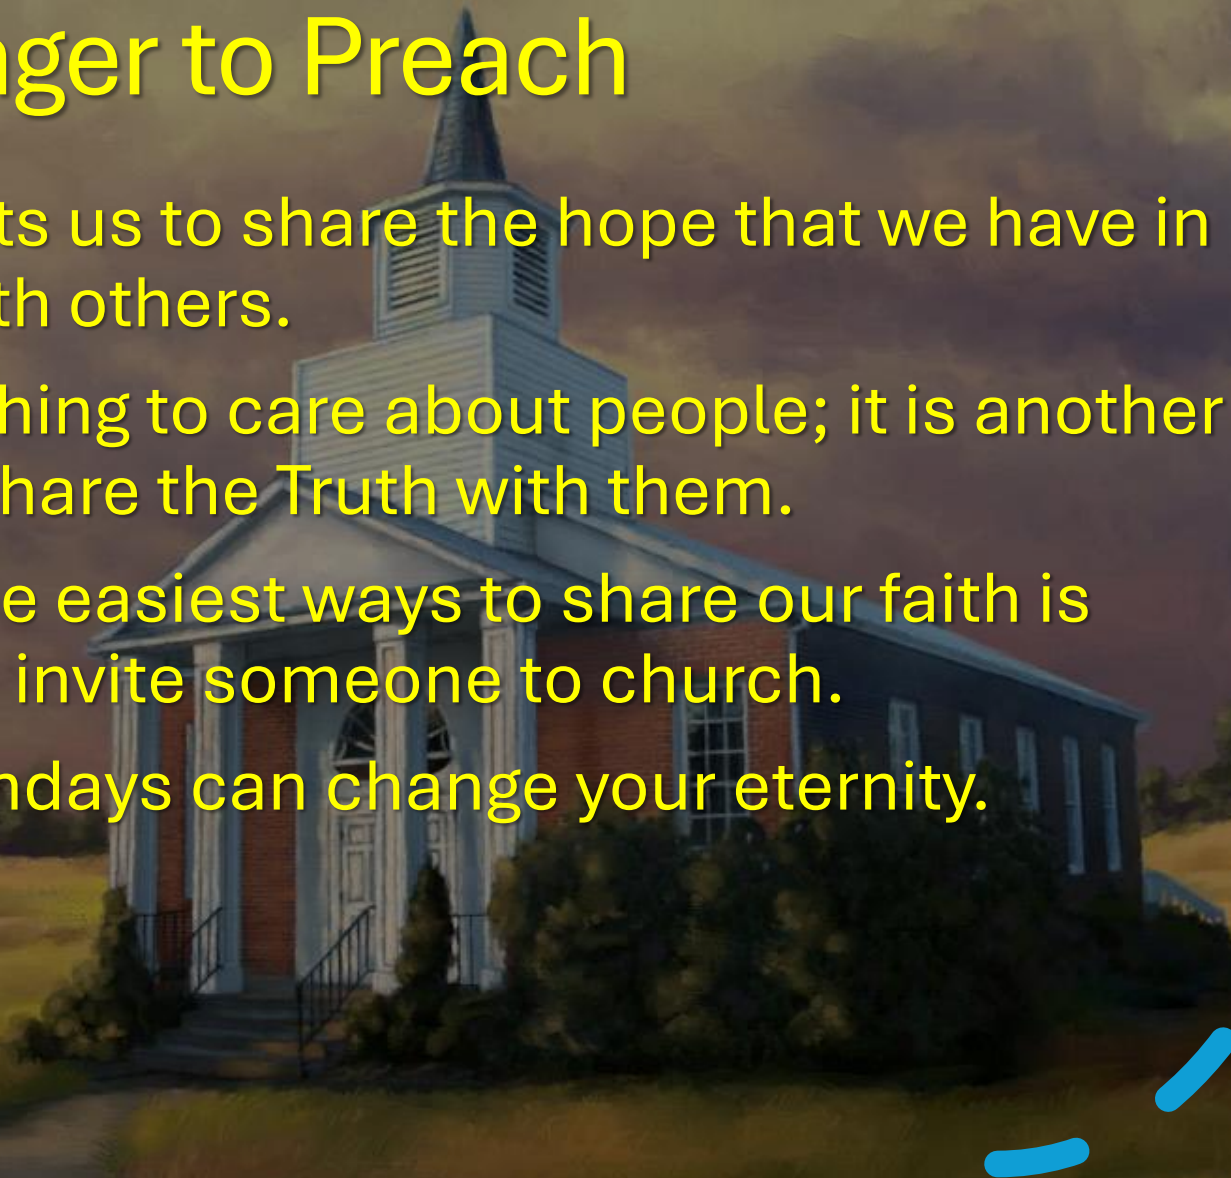

We Are Obligated to People

- Paul was obligated to share the gospel with the people in Rome because he owed it to them.
- All of us were born and live in a broken world.
- The reality of our salvation should make a difference in our lives.
- We are obligated to try to get people to see the light of the gospel of Christ and be saved!

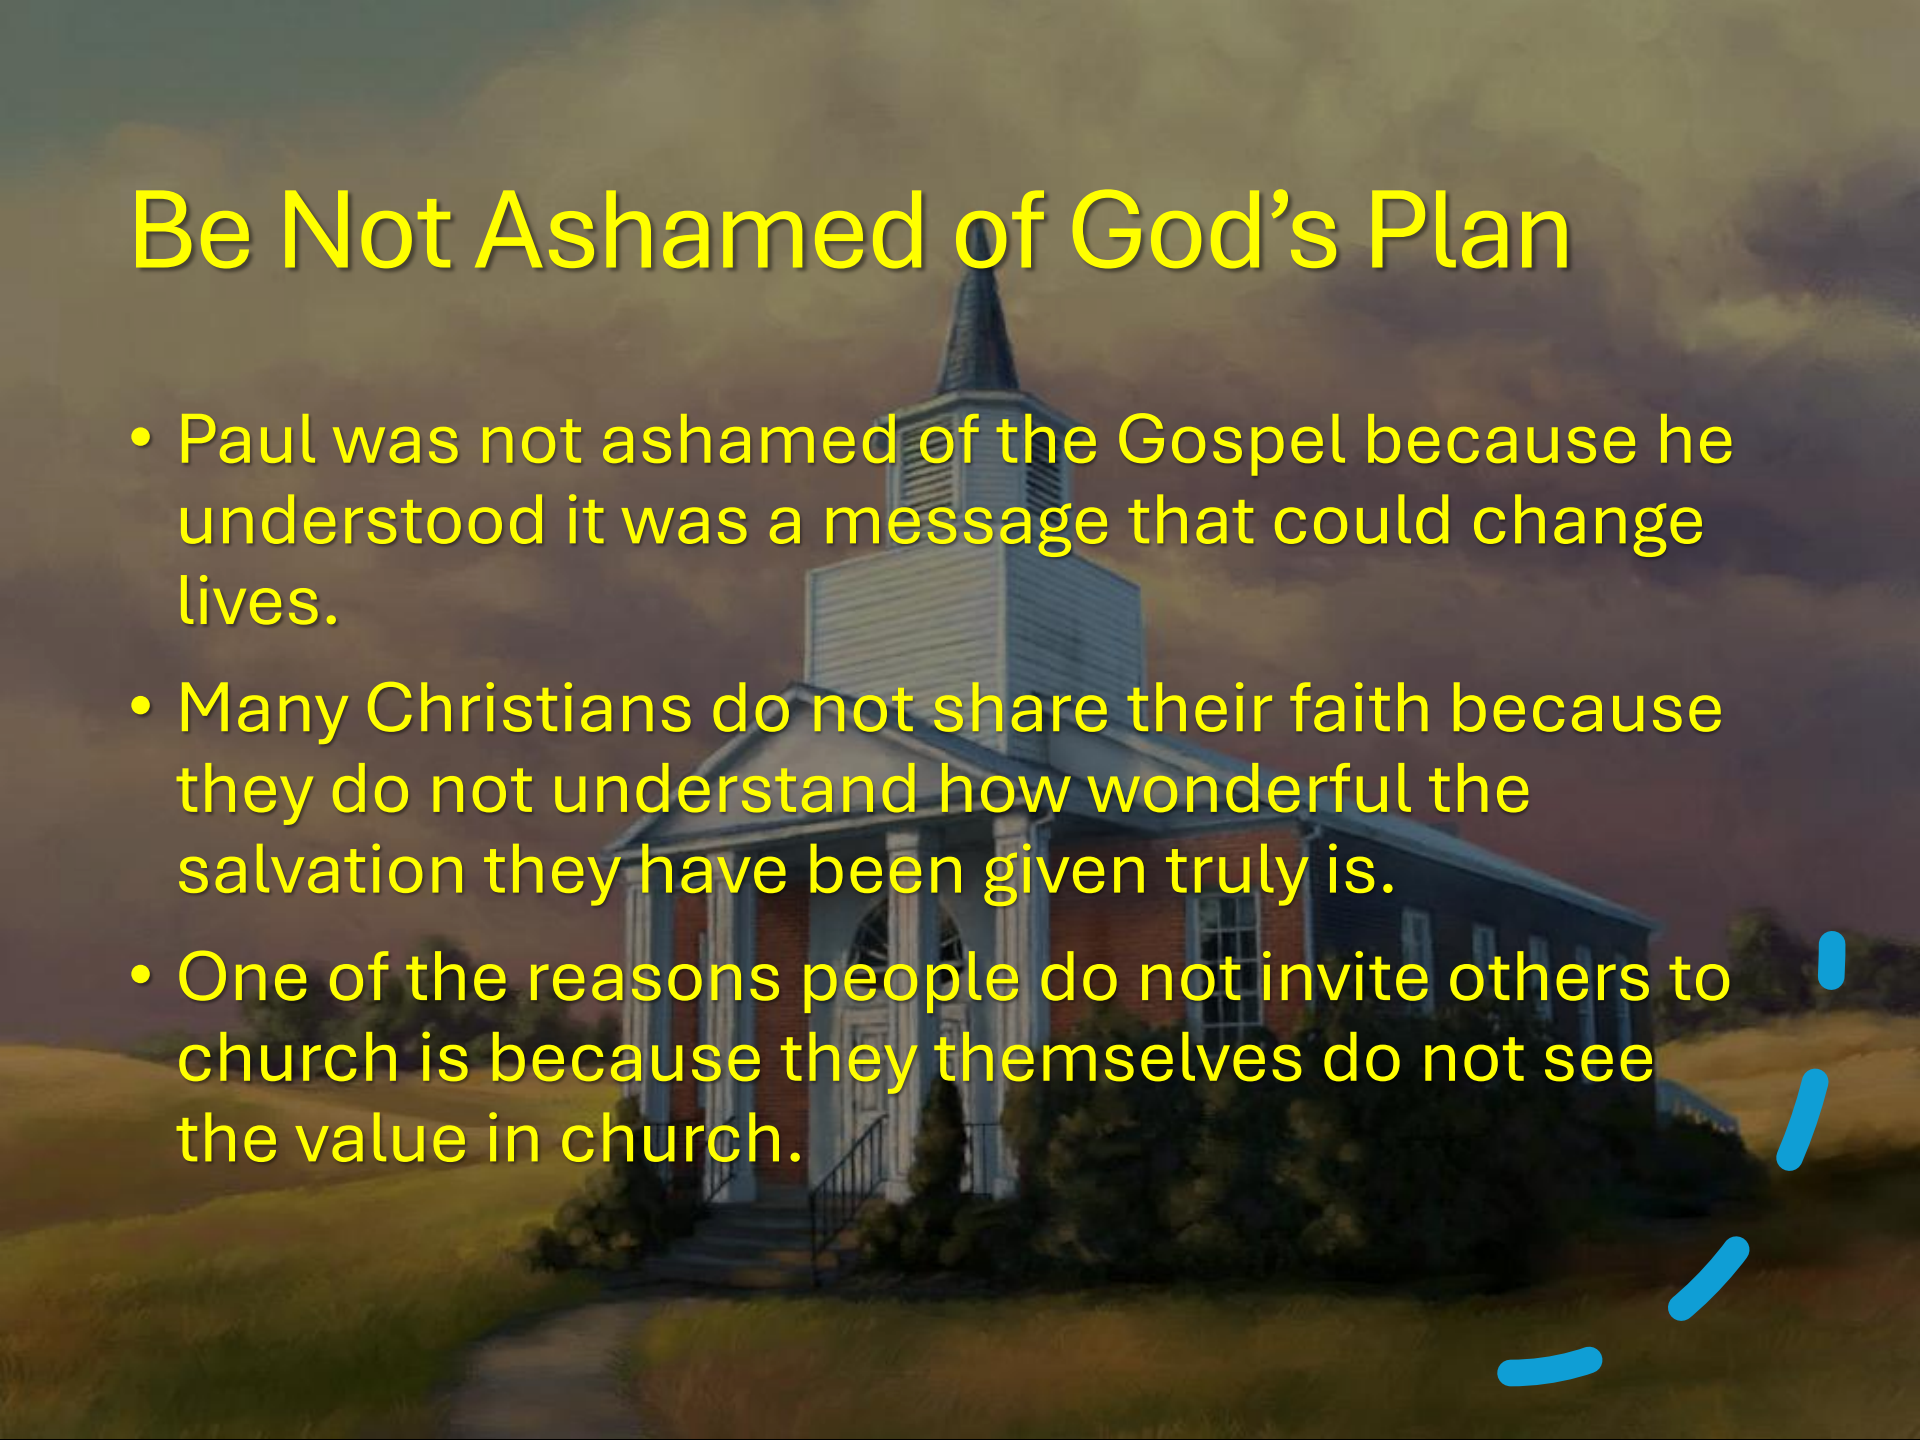

I Am Eager to Preach

- God wants us to share the hope that we have in Christ with others.
- It is one thing to care about people; it is another thing to share the Truth with them.
- One of the easiest ways to share our faith is simply to invite someone to church.
- Good Sundays can change your eternity.

Be Not Ashamed of God's Plan

- Paul was not ashamed of the Gospel because he understood it was a message that could change lives.
- Many Christians do not share their faith because they do not understand how wonderful the salvation they have been given truly is.
- One of the reasons people do not invite others to church is because they themselves do not see the value in church.

Conclusion

- We can have the most inspired worship, and the Spirit of God can be powerfully manifest, but that is just the fuel.
- To light that fuel, a spark is required and that spark is us.
- When we step out in faith, pray and share our faith or invite someone to church, God is able to take that spark and use it to change the eternity of another person.
